DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, uric acid, catarrh of the bladder and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work and in private practice, and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble.

When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. ## Ballade of the Open Fireplace.

Some like apartments warmed by steam, Some claim the furnace stands the test, Some say in comfort they can dream When rattling pipes tell them of rest. Then add, "No sleep it gives a zest," And makes them happy as can be. To me it is the open fireplace for me!

Before the grate I sit and gaze; The pictures there fill me with joy; They tell me back to my old days When I was just a careless boy— When foolish doubts did not annoy, When life seemed ever gay and free, With pipe and furs and I won't say— To open fireplace for me!

When night is here, and lights burn low, I watch the flickering shadows play Upon the floor: They come and go As do one's thoughts, now grave now gay. Contentment mine? Well, I should say! Life's better than I thought it would be— The open fireplace for me!

THE above picture of the man and fish is the trademark of Scott's Emulsion, and is the synonym for strength and purity. It is sold in almost all the civilized countries of the globe. If the cod fish became extinct it would be a world-wide calamity, because the oil that comes from its liver surpasses all other fats in nourishing and life-giving properties. Thirty years ago the proprietors of Scott's Emulsion found a way of preparing cod liver oil so that everyone can take it and get the full value of the oil without the objectionable taste. Scott's Emulsion is the best thing in the world for weak, backward children, thin, delicate people, and all conditions of wasting and lost strength.

Fur Time.

The fur season is at hand, the days when the ladies appear with their muffs and neckpieces are with us once more, and so are the days when the fur bearing animals have to step carefully and travel about quietly to avoid the traps or the bullets from the hunters. The trappers of Maine get many hundreds of dollars' worth of furs annually and these furs are shipped away to be made ready for purchasers of muffs, neckpieces, gloves, capes and coats. The furs which are mostly obtained in this locality are those of the mink, skunk, muskrat, raccoon and fox. The mink is really one of the most valuable and most plenty of the fur bearing animals captured hereabouts. The skins are at their best when taken from the middle of November to the middle of January, as they are then of the best color. Earlier than that their hair is shorter and later it is faded. A prime mink skin will bring from $3 to $7 according to its size, condition and color. As a rule mink is captured with the aid of a dog. The little animal is found along the shores of rivers and streams, and while its greatest safety lies in the water, it will almost always take to a hole in the ledges when pursued and if it is driven to the water it will usually get into the rocks as soon as possible. The mink hunter with an iron bar, a pistol and a dog start on the war path. The dog scents the mink and drives him to take refuge in a crack in a ledge. Then the hunter finding a place in the ledge inserts the bar and rattles it about, the noise frightens the animal which sticks its head out of the hole and a shot from a pistol does the rest. Many of the mink hunters use a steel trap, however, for catching them, baiting with fish which is the most sought article of food on the menu of the mink family. Skunks as a rule are caught in traps and their skins when in good condition bring from 25 cents to $1.00. Chicken meat is very seductive to the skunk's appetite and the trapper not only gets a good price for the skin but if he also extracts the oil he has also another source of revenue. The muskrats are, of course, plenty especially along old wharves and dams. At Winnegance a great many rats are taken every year. Their skins are most valuable in the spring when they bring 25 cents. At this season they are worth 15 to 20 cents. For the skin of the raccoon fur buyers pay from 75 cents to $1.50 each for them. These animals are as a rule captured at night by men with dogs especially trained for the work. The coons are great lovers of corn and in the fall of the year infest the corn fields and cause the farmers much annoyance. The dog scents the coon, which, when located, is usually in a tree or in a den in a ledge. If in the former he is sometimes shot, while in other cases the hunter climbs up a tree and cuts off the limb on which the coon is perched and lets the animal fall to the ground, when the dogs get in their work. Coons when fat often reach a good size. If they are found in a den in the ledge the hunter smokes them out. Deer skins bring from 50 cents to $1.50 are really of little use except for rugs. A good many foxes are taken in this locality. As a rule foxes are shot but occasionally they are trapped. It is said that a fox so hates to be captured that it caught by a leg in a trap he will sometimes gnaw off the leg to escape. A red fox skin brings $2.25 to $5.00. If you see a grey fox or even a black one be sure to shoot him. They are very rare and the skin of the former is worth $75 to $800, while that of the latter will net $100 to $1,000. A black fox was seen in Woolwich woods several times last winter but no gunner was lucky enough to bring him down. It is said that no dog lives which can run down a black fox. They always show reserve power when needed, great endurance and are the wisest animal known to man. Bears are found in Oxford and Aroostook counties. If you see a bear in your travels be sure to get him. His skin is worth $10 to $20 and occasionally as high as $35 or even $40.

Jupiter, King of the Eastern Sky.

Great Planet Now at Its Highest Brilliance—Points for Star Gazers. In these crisp evenings when the dark comes early, and when the heavens sparkle with the forerunning frosts of winter, which now draw swiftly earthward from cold outer space, the greatest of all the gods, Jupiter, adorns the eastern sky. While Saturn glows in the south, alone in his planetary grandeur, as if avoiding the presence of the livelier stars, Jupiter rises with the Pleiades, fast chased by Orion ablaze with wonderful brilliancies. It would be impossible to place in sharper contrast the peculiarities that distinguish the planets from the fixed stars than they are now placed by the presence of Jupiter in one of the richest regions of the starry heavens. People who know little of astronomy, but wish that they knew more, often complain of the difficulty the experience in trying to find the planets in the crowd of the stars. Here, then, is an almost unparalleled opportunity, not only to find Jupiter, but to learn to recognize the essential difference between the appearance of a planet and that of the stars. If you go out of doors between 8 and 9 o'clock in the evening, you will see over in the east, above the hills, a very brilliant point of light, gleaming like a distant signal lamp. That is Jupiter. You cannot mistake him, for he is too plainly the king! He has no equals and no rivals about him. But, now, note his most interesting situation with reference to two very beautiful and celebrated groups of stars. Close above Jupiter, toward the west, you will see a glittering assemblage of small stars, grouped like a cluster of grapes sparkling with hoar frost. They are the Pleiades, most famous of stars, most ancient in the superstitions of the very beginnings of human history, and most mysterious in the light of modern scientific revelation of their half nebulous constitution. On the other side, toward the east from Jupiter, you will see the V-shaped figure of the Hyades, with the splendid red-tinted Aldebaran blazing on the tip of one of the arms of the mimic letter. Jupiter is like a golden fulcrum, on which, suspended at the ends of an invisible balance, hang these two heaps of starry gems. Then note the difference between the look of the great planet and the looks of those stars. Take Aldebaran, for example. Its light is all a glitter with restless shooting of bright colored rays. The light of Jupiter is steady, almost motionless, but slightly disturbed now and then by the passing of an atmospheric billow, like the reflection of a ship's lamp on the water. If you watch Jupiter throughout the coming winter you will see him slowly quit his place, leave the Pleiades and the Hyades and eventually, with majestic step, advance eastward over the head of Orion, although at first he will move westward in consequence of the apparent retrogression in his movement caused by the swifter motion of the earth in the same direction. In any event, whether you look at Jupiter now and forget him next week, which is not likely, or whether you continue to follow him round and round the sky as long as you live, which is far more probable, do not fail at the beginning of your acquaintance to fix in your mind the chief facts known about him. Jupiter is a globe about thirteen hundred times as large as the earth, but the materials of which he is made are of such a nature, or such a state, that in weight he exceeds the earth only three hundred and eighteen times. His surface is a hundred and twenty times as extensive as that of the earth. He has four moons as large as, or larger than, our moon, and three that, as far as size goes, are mere toy moons, the largest of them being perhaps less than a hundred miles in diameter. He is the giant of the planetary system, as he has captured more comets, and in general, exercised more disturbing force in the solar empire, than any other member of it. Is Jupiter inhabited? Astronomy cannot answer the question. But, as in the case of Saturn, we must say: If Jupiter has inhabitants they cannot be much like us; they are either greater, or they are less, than we in the ranks of organic existence. Children's Corner. A Little Girl's Reward. Once upon a time, a little girl was passing a rich girl's house. She saw a little playing with a doll. She looked in and saw the doll's head come off. It could be fixed, but the girl did not want the doll, so she said "if you do not want the doll give her to me." So she gave her the doll. The poor little girl was so pleased with her new treasure that she ran so fast to her home of sticks and leaves. The next morning she went to get her breakfast by begging it. After she had got her breakfast, she tried to think of something she could do to earn some money. At last she thought she could earn some by picking some flowers and selling them, so she went into the woods and picked the best she could find. When she came back with all she could carry, she made them into bouquets to sell for a cent each. Then she went to sell them. She had such good luck that she earned half a dollar and bought her some dinner. She took her dinner home and gave her doll some too. Every day she picked and sold flowers until they were all gone. At that time she was ten years old. In winter she lived by selling papers. The next summer she was picking flowers she saw a pocketbook lying at her feet. She opened it, and found the name of the owner. It was one of the richest men in the city. She gave it to him and he was greatly pleased for it saved him lots of trouble. He took her as his daughter, and she went to school and grew up a good honest woman. CORA M. DAX.

Fire at Hebron.

Monday morning about two o'clock Percival Everett and family were awakened by a bright blaze close to their house. The large barn, which sets a little way from the house was in flames, and the fire was so well under way that it was impossible to get into the barn to save anything.

Fortunately the wind was in the right direction to blow the sparks from the house, or that must have gone too. Three horses, eight cows, all of Mr. Everett's farming tools, a barn full of hay and in fact everything which the barn contained, except a light wagon, was burned. There was no insurance and the loss is placed at $2,000.

The farm is situated about a mile from Hebron Academy.

Tarbox, Fairs-E. G. Buzzell, Transportation-N. P. Fox, Agricultural operations-B. F. Knight. The premium list was fully revised, some changes and many advances being made in it. It is the purpose to offer premiums large and varied enough to bring out a full exhibit of the best articles grown or manufactured within the limits of the society and to make the fair of 1906 an agricultural exhibition well worthy the name.

IN HOG LOTS.

Portable Woven Wire Fencing. Cheap Fence For Small Yards. By ROBERT S. SHAW, Michigan experiment station.

In pursuing economic methods of swine husbandry pasture and forage crops are essential throughout the greatest possible portion of the year. Continuous pasturing and foraging by hogs are largely dependent on a succession of these two classes of crops. This fact would seem to require either a number of small lots or one large one subdivided by portable fences or hurdles.

Portable fences constructed of light lumber have been commonly used in the past, but this material is no longer practicable under general conditions. Division of lots can be made by means of a portable woven wire fence made as follows: Set a row of posts two rods apart for the support of the portable fence. The figure shows a contrivance devised for the attachment of a portable woven wire fence at the ends. Two posts cleated together at both top and bottom about four inches apart are set in line with the fence at each end.

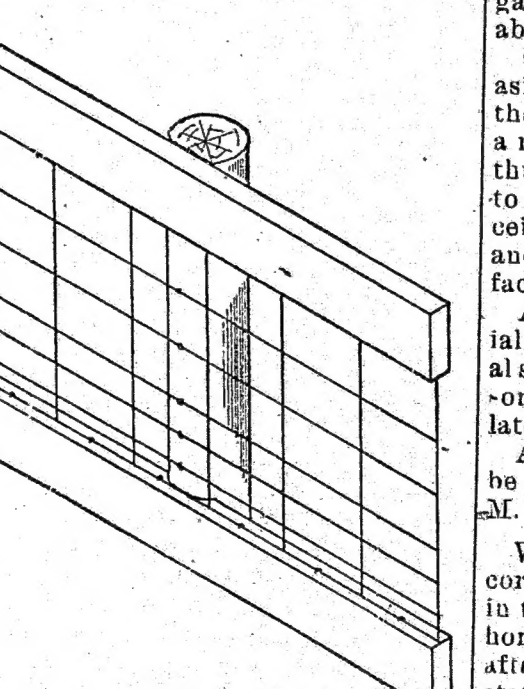

If the woven wire is stapled to the end posts firmly enough to hold it the fence will be badly damaged in withdrawing the staples to remove it, so that it would soon be destroyed. In order to overcome this difficulty we build two pieces of 1 by 4 inch oak on the fence in the form of clamps, placing these clamps one on each side of an upright wire to prevent slipping of the laterals. This is then drawn through between the two posts at one end and blocked by 2 by 4 pieces. A wire stretcher is then attached to the other end, the fence is pulled up tight, the end drawn through between the end posts and clamps and blocks used as heretofore described. The stretcher can then be slacked back and removed.

The wire fence is held in an upright position against the intermediate posts by staples only partly driven. In some cases it may be necessary to pin the fence down between the posts. Occasionally sags will occur in the ground where the wire is held by the tension of the wire. In such cases wrap a short piece of wire around a rock, bury this underneath the fence and fasten the bottom strand of the fence down to the wires which project above the ground from the rock. For portable fencing we have used thirty inch woven wire, which seems to be high enough. A strand of barbed wire affords effective restraint when placed underneath a woven wire fence.

The question of cheap, durable and serviceable fencing for the small yards adjacent to the piggery is important. A tight board fence probably makes the most perfect one for turning hogs. We have attempted to make a suitable substitute. The fences forming our small pens are constructed of woven wire with 2 by 6 inch material at bottom and top. The plan is shown in the figure.

Making Alfalfa Hay.

I have had much better success saving alfalfa hay than I had in twenty years' experience with clover. In this climate it is not often possible to cure it out with the green color that they secure in the arid regions. By heating in the cock, mow or rack it will bleach out a pale white or light color. I do not believe this change of color injures the quality of the hay. The eating is proof of the quality. After a field has been well started the first cutting is usually the coarsest, heaviest and hardest to cure. Each successive cutting may be expected to improve in quality, but lessen in quantity. -John Jamison in Ohio Farmer.

Fruit Rot of Tomatoes.

Fruit rot of tomatoes is combated more or less successfully by pruning and training vines to admit light and air, together with the destruction of all diseased fruits, to prevent the spread of infection.

WEST FRYEBURG.

With the Literary Club.

The Sterling Literary club, with full numbers, met on Tuesday, Nov. 21, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. E. Hutchins.

In the afternoon there were readings by several of the club, appropriate to the Thanksgiving season.

After lamplight, we have no electric light as yet, there was a season of merry sociability, before the serving of the six o'clock dinner, other times designated as "club tea." Tea is not in abundance on these occasions, but delicious coffee and all the nice eatable things that New England, and especially Maine house-cooking are always present. On this occasion, as always, the hosts gave of their best for the entertainment of those gathered at their elegantly spread and abundant feast.

Only one guest was noticed present aside from those directly connected with the club. Roger Hutchins, of Norway, a relative of the host, being the guest thus honored. It may not have occurred to young Mr. Hutchins that the club received its name in honor of his Stirling ancestry of colonial note, but this is the fact.

After dinner passed swiftly with general chat, interspersed with an occasional song, the hostess singing some new songs added to her repertoire on her late visit to H. H.

An afternoon meeting of the club is to be held Dec. 5th, at the home of Mrs. M. A. Hill.

Will Pitman, who has been drawing corn from North Fryeburg to the station in the village, has lost one of his work horses, which fell dead in his stable just after one of his trips to and from the station.

WEST BETHEL.

A Profitable Term of School.
Our village school taught by Agnes L. Barton of Bethel closed the fall term last Friday. Miss Barton has spent her time for the best interest of her pupils, who have made good progress in their studies and all speak very highly of their teacher. As one young lady remarked to your correspondent, "She tries awful hard to teach us all she can." Great satisfaction is the result to both scholars and parents. This has been a very quiet term, there has not been the least disturbance during the entire term.
Thursday afternoon there was a school exhibition given by the scholars. The school-room was very prettily decorated and looked fine. There were quite a number of visitors present. There was a very fine program which was fully carried out without the least hesitation in all its parts, as each one promptly took their position acting their part, doing credit to themselves, and to the pride of their teacher.
Friday afternoon the teacher gave the scholars a cobweb party, the web being woven all around under and over the seats, each scholar having a web to wind up, finding a prize at the other end. There was one web not taken up and the teacher was to her surprise told it was hers and to wind it up. She seemed to fear it might be a joke on her but was reached she found a gold ring. She seemed very much pleased to receive so nice a present from her scholars.

Why the Evergreen Trees Never Lose Their Leaves.

Winter was coming, and the birds had flown far to the south where the air was warm and they could find berries to eat. One little bird had broken its wing and could not fly with the others. It was alone in the cold world of snow and snow. The forest looked warm, and it made its way to the trees as well as it could to ask for help.
First it came to a birch tree. "Beautiful birch tree," it said, "my wing is broken, and my friends have flown away. May I live among your branches till they come back to me?"
"No, indeed," answered the birch tree, drawing her fair green leaves away. "We of the great forest have our own birds to help. I can do nothing for you."

"The birch is not very strong," said the little bird to itself, "and it might be that it could not hold me easily. I will ask the oak. So the bird said: 'Great oak tree, you are so strong, will you not let me live on your boughs till my friends come back in the springtime?'
"In the springtime!" cried the oak. "That is a long way off. How do I know what you might do in all that time? Birds are always looking for something to eat, and you might eat up some of my acorns."

"It may be that the willow will be kind to me," thought the bird; and it said, "Gentle willow, my wing is broken and I could not fly to the South with the other birds. May I live on your branches till the springtime?"
The willow did not look gentle then; she drew herself up proudly and said, "Indeed, I do not know you, and we willows never talk to people who we do not know. Very likely there are trees somewhere that will take in strange birds. Leave me at once."

The poor little bird did not know what to do. Its wing was not yet strong but it began to fly away as well as it could. Before it had gone far a voice was heard: "Little bird," it said, "where are you going?"
"Indeed, I do not know," answered the bird sadly. "I am very cold."
Come right here then," said the friendly spruce tree, for it was her voice that had called. "You shall live on my warmest branch all winter if you choose."

"Will you really let me?" asked the little bird eagerly.
"Indeed," answered the kind hearted spruce tree. "If your friends have flown away, it is time for the trees to help you. Here is the branch where my leaves are thickest and softest. We do not know. Very likely there are trees somewhere that will take in strange birds. Leave me at once."

Lost in the Woods.
But He Traveled in a Circle and Did not

Dismissing the services of a guide for an afternoon's tramp through the woods, a Boston business man essayed to find a deer without assistance, and because of his experience and the resultant amusement of his companions he now fervently wishes he had followed the advice of friends camping with him and taken a woodsman.

After tramping through the snow for several hours the huntsman made up his mind to return to his comfortable quarters, but found his way was wandering aimlessly about and became convinced he was lost. Having heard many stories of the strange mental affliction which overtakes lost persons, he determined to keep his wits as follow all the rules of woodcraft to find the direction in which he should go.

He established north and south by moss on trees and by the thicker limbs on the southerly side, and then climbed several giants of the forest in an effort to get to bearings. Every attempt to locate himself seemed to be of no avail. He searched for a flowing brook to follow to a stream, and he fired his gun several times, but only disappointment resulted. Finally as night was coming on, he gave up in despair and determined to make the best of the situation.

Selecting a favorable spot, he cut down several saplings and arranged a sort of lean-to, which would afford him protection. Before the sun disappeared entirely he cut a notch in a tree trunk in the direction where it was last seen, so that, if the following day proved cloudy he should have something to indicate the compass points beside the moss on the trees. He gathered wood for a fire and sat down to meditate on the possibilities of danger from wild animals.

Hardly had he got settled with the flames from his fire leaping high in the air, that he was startled by a loud shout, and in response to the welcome sound he yelled "Halloo!" with all his might. In five minutes he was surrounded by a group of friends and guides.

"Where am I?" he asked nervously, after the greetings were over.
"About two minutes' walk from camp, come up and have some supper," said one of his friends, and right cheerfully the man responded.

The explanation of the situation was simple. He had almost reached home when he decided to give up the search. Earlier in the evening when his companions feared he was lost, they started out to find him, and, traveling some distance from camp, they did not hear his gun, nor his cries. They returned to quarters and were eating supper when the reflection of his fire showed in the darkness. An investigation the next day proved that the man had not been a mile from his camp during his afternoon's walk.

The funeral of Peter M. Holden was held Thursday afternoon, at his late residence near North Paris, in charge of Granite Lodge of Masons, West Paris, of which he was a charter member.

Some Mother's Daughter.

Rescue Work of the Salvation Army.
People nowadays are far too apt to deal with the most serious problems which confront the age in an abstract way. Human beings are a quantity, an X, to be dealt with, improved or reformed, led hither or driven thither by a set of theories.

Flesh and blood, however, has an inherited aversion to these theories. There were theories in the days of our forefathers and time has exploded and made a laughing stock of them, and so it will be with many of the theories of today. George Meredith may propose limited marriages—some one else propose something else, but on the whole the world will go on just as it did before.

The questions of the "social evil" so called,—of the fallen sisterhood to be found in such numbers in any of our large cities and in the slums, these are living problems that have to be faced. They cry for solution. Intrigue, suicide, murder, infanticide and other crimes connected with this evil serve to bring it constantly before the eyes of the public, and the near approach of Thanksgiving brings the publicity to the fore, and the people are waiting to greet their friends.

Miss Rand of Auburn and Rebekah Bridgman of Lewiston were in town over Sunday, going and coming via Turner electric.

The Salvation Army has been peculiarly successful in its Rescue Work for fallen women. Theories play no part in its program. They may be well enough in their way, but a library full could not heal one broken heart, nor lead one poor girl back to virtue's path. The Salvationists are faced to face with stern facts. They see perishing women drowning in a horrible sea of iniquity, and with loving hearts and tender hands they rush to the rescue. They treat the women they meet as Women, not as an Evil, and in this lies the secret of their great success.

Most people would be astounded that know that a moderate and conservative estimate of the number of these fallen women in the United States alone is over 250,000. We wish it were possible to believe this to be a mistake. It is, alas, too sadly true. Think of it! A quarter of a million girls and women ruined and ruined. Think of their mothers! Think of the homes they represent; the empty chair; the bowed-down, gray-haired parents. Think of the anguished fathers still searching the highways and byways of the world for their girls! Think of thousands of these girls longing for a day of escape from this living death! Think once more of the Salvationists, saying of old to the sinful woman, "Go in peace, and sin no more," and then you will understand why the Salvation Army, with its great heart of human pity, seeks to save these erring ones. Oh no! They are not all hardened. Brought up in happy, innocent homes, many of them knew nothing of the world's wickedness—and when some engaging sounder professed love, vowed sincerity and promised marriage, they foolishly trusted themselves, only when too late, to find out they had been betrayed. Shame did the rest, and they were lost to all who knew and loved them.

The tales these poor girls pour into the ears of the Army Rescue Officers make one long for the day when the human brutes who brought about their downfall, will be rightly known as "Fallen Men," and ostracized from society as their victims are now. Seldom is there a case where one entered this life through wanton wickedness. It is generally that they loved not wisely, but too well.

It is many years now since the Salvation Army opened its first Rescue Home in London, Eng., and since then, these fallen women have been established all over the civilized globe.

The Home in Boston is in Dorchester, and a Maternity Hospital is connected with it. In both these institutions there is accommodation for 40 girls and children as well, and the homes are generally full.

The workers visit the homes of ill repute, and talk to the girls they meet on the streets at night, inviting them to the homes, and giving a printed card of welcome to those who will not come at once. Debt, lack of clothing, and many other things hinder some from coming when they would like to, but they promise to come afterwards, and often keep their word.

Midnight suppers are occasionally held, too, for fallen sisterhood, and through these many have been reached and influenced.

A large preventative work is also accomplished, and thoughtful country homes, thinking work is easily obtained in a large city, and who are in great danger, are sent back to their homes—only too glad to go.

If space would permit, we could tell most heart-rending tales of poor girls, whom our officers rescued just as they were about to end their lives by their own hands, and who are now leading virtuous lives again—some restored to homes where a loving father and mother were waiting of joy in welcoming back their darling child.

Once inside the Rescue Home, the entire atmosphere is one of love. Every rule is enforced by love, and very soon the cleanliness and helpful surroundings influence even the hardest cases. Every girl has to work, and needle-work is taught them—no easy task, for some of them never handled a needle before. Fancy work is also done and the proceeds of the sale of the articles made go far towards supporting the Home. Each girl is taught housework, and as soon as they have evidenced a real change in their lives, and are competent, they are sent out to situations, care being taken that the homes they are sent to are of a good Christian character.

There are failures of course, girls who go back to the old life, when once they have left the restraining influence of the Rescue Home,—but these form—but a very small percentage of the whole, and even of these, many come back again.

The girls are kept in touch with, and once a week come to the Home to have tea with the workers, those who go too far away for that are regularly written to.

They have formed an "Out-of-Love" league amongst themselves, and out of their wages, contribute gladly towards saving and rescuing others. Truly this is a commendable work.

WEST PARIS.

Temperance Sunday.

World's Temperance Sunday was well observed here last Sunday, at the Methodist church in the morning. Rev. D. F. Nelson, while he did not preach a really temperance sermon, referred to it but thoughtfully at the present time. The Evangelist Johnson, in the two weeks just past, touched upon the subject nearly every time he spoke, and said some good things for our prohibition State. Mr. Johnson was from the state of Vermont where the people are going to have the prohibition law put in force again.

Rev. F. E. Barton preached a good temperance sermon in the afternoon for the Universalist society.

The W. O. T. U. had a very interesting meeting in the evening, which was opened with a praise service, and prayer by Rev. D. F. Nelson. A paper, stating what the Woman's Christian Temperance Union believes in, was read by Mrs. C. H. Lane. Another interesting paper by Lady Henry Somerset, was given by Mrs. Alice Nelson. A temperance story was read in a pleasing manner by Elmer Tuell. A recitation by Ivan Tuell and a pretty exercise by six little girls and a Cold Water song by Alice Barden. The children all did exceptionally well. A quartet, Luther Irish, tenor, Mrs. L. Bates, soprano, Mrs. Luther Irish, alto, and H. C. Loveland, bass, with Della H. Lane, organist, rendered sweet music. The exercises were closed by singing remarks and benediction by Rev. F. E. Barton. The house was well filled.

HEN TOOK A RUGGY RIDE.

A few weeks ago we related two incidents in regard to animals that happened in this vicinity. Here is another and it is about a hen this time that wanted to take a ride. A few nights ago Mrs. Harry Johnson of Trap Corner hitched her horse into the wagon to come over to the village, as usual, for her husband, who works for the Paris Mfg. Co. When about half-way over the wagon ran over a stone with a jolt and she heard something drop and then the "Caw, caw, quack," of one of her pet pullets, that evidently had been on the rear axle of the wagon when she started from home. She got out and tried to catch her, but it being rather dark and she alone with the horse, decided to leave the hen there in the bushes, where she had fluttered beyond her reach. On their return Harry easily found her and they took her back home still talking in her hen way as much as to say, "I wanted a ride but you had to jolt me and lose me beside the road so I couldn't have it. Caw, caw, quack."

Mrs. Lucinda Small has gone to Bryans River to spend this week with friends there.

Rev. Geo. Keyes will preach at the Free Baptist church next Sunday morning, and will go to North Paris in the afternoon.
